

BARRON'S

ELECTRONIC INVESTOR | SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3, 2011

Fidelity Polishes Its iPad App

By THERESA W. CAREY

The brokerage and fund giant upgrades its tablet app and adds two algorithms for heavy traders. More from Just2Trade, too.

JUST2TRADE (www.just2trade.com), which prides itself on its rock-bottom $2.50 commissions, has updated its platform with streaming charts and complex options-trading tools.

Launched in October, the streaming charts can be found under the research tab if you select "Tick" as the time period. You can create up to five charts, using a tab in the charting window, and compare as many as three symbols in each. Your watchlist and portfolio positions display on the side bar; you can quickly add one of those symbols to a chart just by clicking on a check box.

More than 60 technical indicators can be included in any chart, and a variety of drawing tools are available. Of note is the ability to enter an order from a chart; if you right-click, an order ticket opens up, pre-populated with the selected price.

Complex options, which launched in June, allow you to select and trade contracts with up to four legs. Options trades are $2.50, plus 50 cents per contract. There also are options pricing and probability tools, supplied by iVolatility. They're useful when deciding which option contracts to trade.

Is the expanded functionality a prelude to higher commissions? CEO Fuad Ahmed insists that it's not. Just2Trade isn't "thinking of raising our prices. That's not up for discussion. Our pricing is $2.50, and will stay $2.50."

Click here to view the article on the Barron's website.